Did You Use the Whole Packet?

For LESS — A Harm-Reduction Journal

The journal is one piece. The tracker, the challenge page, the affirmations, the ritual, the letter, and going outside are the rest. Check off what you actually used each week.

Challenge the Narrative

For LESS — A Harm-Reduction Journal

TRY THIS RIGHT NOW

The urge feels huge right now. It won't stay huge. Interrupt it, then decide.

- 1 Fill a bowl with cold water and ice, and put your face in for 15-20 seconds. Let the cold interrupt the urge before you decide anything.
- 2 Before you use, pause and ask: can I use a little less than last time, or wait a little longer than usual?
- 3 Text or call someone who knows what you're working on, even just to say where you're at right now.
- 4 Set a timer for 15 minutes and see if the urge softens before you act on it.
- 5 Write down what you were feeling in the five minutes before the urge -- name it instead of numbing it.
- 6 Move your body for a few minutes -- a walk, stretching, anything that isn't sitting with the urge alone.

SAY IT OUT LOUD

Actually say these out loud. Your own voice interrupts the story in your head.

- “Less is still progress. I don't have to be perfect to be doing better.”
- “I am allowed to go at my own pace.”
- “Every time I choose a little less, I'm proving I can.”
- “One hard moment does not undo the ground I've gained.”
- “I am learning myself, not failing myself.”
- “Cutting back today makes tomorrow a little easier.”

MY LIFE NOW

Draw it. No talent required -- shapes, scribbles, symbols all count.

THE LINE BETWEEN

MY LIFE CLEAR OF AS MUCH OF IT

Draw the version of your life on the other side of this.

The Clear Mind Ritual

For LESS — A Harm-Reduction Journal

A short ritual to calm your nervous system and reconnect with who you're becoming. Do it anywhere quiet.

1 Set Your Timer

Set a timer on your phone or the microwave for 20 minutes. This is protected time -- nothing else needs your attention right now.

2 Find Your Space

Go somewhere quiet. Sit in a comfortable chair or lie down flat on your back. Let your body fully settle -- you don't need to hold yourself up.

3 Breathe

Close your eyes. Breathe in this pattern: breathe in for 5 seconds... hold for 5 seconds... let it out slowly for 7 seconds. Repeat this cycle 5 times, letting your shoulders drop a little more with every exhale.

4 Let the Noise Empty Out

Let your breath return to normal. Sit for a moment with no goal but stillness. If a thought shows up, don't fight it -- notice it, and let it float past like a cloud.

You're not trying to think about nothing. You're just not chasing anything that shows up.

5 Picture Life living with so much less of this

Now gently bring to mind a version of you who is fully living with so much less of this. Let the picture build slowly -- don't rush it. Ask yourself, in detail:

How does this version of you stand? What does their posture look like?

What's on their face -- are they smiling, at ease, steady?

What are they wearing? Where are they, exactly?

What do you smell around them -- coffee, fresh air, home?

What do you feel in your chest when you picture them?

What do you know, deep down, about who this version of you really is?

6 Sit With the Feeling

Stay with this image and this feeling for about 7 minutes. Let it feel real, even just for now. Every time your mind drifts, gently bring it back to how this version of you feels, not just how they look.

7 Come Back Slowly

Bring your attention back to your breath. A few slow, easy inhales and exhales. When you're ready, slowly open your eyes. Give yourself a moment before you stand up.

8 Repeat This Often

Do this ritual as often as you can this week -- once a day if you're able, but even once is a real reset. The more you visit this version of you, the more familiar it becomes.

Would rather be guided out loud instead of reading this yourself? We're recording this exact script so you can close your eyes and just listen -- keep an eye on the site for the audio version.

Grounded

For LESS — A Harm-Reduction Journal

Nature slows a racing mind down faster than almost anything else. Do this one outside, if you can.

1 Find Your Spot

Go outside to a quiet area, near a tree if you can find one. Sit or stand comfortably. If you're able to go barefoot, do -- feeling the ground under you helps this work.

2 Just Be Present

Don't try to think about anything in particular. Just sit with nature around you. When a thought shows up, gently redirect it away and come back to right here, right now.

3 Notice With All Five Senses

What do you see around you -- light, color, movement?

What do you hear -- wind, birds, leaves, distant sound?

What do you smell in the air right now?

What can you taste -- even just the air itself?

Reach out and touch something near you -- bark, grass, dirt, stone. What is it? How does it actually feel?

4 Check In

Ask yourself: am I still fully present in this moment, right now? If not, that's okay -- gently come back to your senses and try again.

5 The Trick: Act As If

Once you feel calm, try this: forget everything you currently believe is true about your world right now. Imagine you are already living the life you wrote about in your Letter Back -- living with so much less of this, 5 years from now.

Pretend that is your current life. Not someday. Now. Act as if it's already true.

6 Carry It Back With You

Even after you go back to your regular day, keep redirecting your thoughts back to that 5-year life as often as you can. Revisit the letter you wrote. Let that version of you lead.

7 Repeat This Often

Try this as many times a day as you're able -- even just a few minutes counts. The more you practice being that version of you, the more real it becomes.

Believe it, and it will be.

A CERTIFICATE OF COURAGE

You Did Something Amazing

A Harm-Reduction Journal

This isn't for finishing perfectly. It's for showing up. Even if you didn't check off every day, every ritual, or every page -- you were willing to look at how much of this you were carrying honestly and try to change it. That willingness is the hardest part, and you already did it.

This certificate is awarded to for choosing yourself, one day at a time.
