

ILIKEITDEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

LESS

A 30-Day Step-Down Journal for Cutting Back

printable pdf · 30 daily pages · progress over perfection

WELCOME

Before Day One

This journal has one beautifully low bar: LESS.
Not perfect. Not zero. Not cold turkey. Just less than yesterday, less than last month, less than the version of you who wasn't paying attention.

Whatever you're stepping down — you name it, this journal tracks it. Every 'less' day is a brick in the wall.

The rules are gentle: an over day isn't a ruined day,
and honesty beats perfection every single time.
You can't step down what you won't look at.

One caring note: if what you're cutting back on is something your body leans on hard, loop in a doctor —
some step-downs deserve a professional co-pilot.

My Step-Down Plan

What I'm doing LESS of, in my own words:

Where I'm starting from (my honest current amount):

My why — what less makes room for:

My swap plan — what I'll reach for instead:

Signed by someone doing less and becoming more: _____

LESS · DAY 1 OF 30

Day 1

today was: good hard mixed proud

Did you do less today than you would have a month ago? Any amount counts — log it.

LESS · DAY 2 OF 30

Day 2

today was: good hard mixed proud

What moment today was hardest to hold the line? What was happening around you?

LESS · DAY 3 OF 30

Day 3

today was: good hard mixed proud

What did you reach for instead today — and was it a kind swap or a sneaky trade?

LESS • DAY 4 OF 30

Day 4

today was: good hard mixed proud

What's one time today you noticed the urge and let it pass without acting?

LESS · DAY 5 OF 30

Day 5

today was: good hard mixed proud

Who or what made today easier? Who or what made it harder?

LESS · DAY 6 OF 30

Day 6

today was: good hard mixed proud

What is 'less' giving you back so far — money, mornings, clarity, pride?

LESS · DAY 7 OF 30

Day 7

today was: good hard mixed proud

If you went over today, no shame — what happened, and what's the adjustment for tomorrow?

Weekly Step-Down Check-In

This week compared to last week — honestly, how much less?

My trickiest trigger this week and my adjustment:

What less is already giving back to me:

Day 8

today was: good hard mixed proud

What's the feeling that most often sends you reaching? Name it, and give it one other option.

LESS · DAY 9 OF 30

Day 9

today was: good hard mixed proud

*Write a sentence of respect to yourself for showing up on day
whatever-this-is.*

LESS · DAY 10 OF 30

Day 10

today was: good hard mixed proud

Picture the version of you at the end of this tracker. What does her day look like?

LESS · DAY 11 OF 30

Day 11

Did you do less today than you would have a month ago? Any amount counts — log it.

Day 12

today was: good hard mixed proud

What moment today was hardest to hold the line? What was happening around you?

LESS · DAY 13 OF 30

Day 13

today was: good hard mixed proud

What did you reach for instead today — and was it a kind swap or a sneaky trade?

LESS · DAY 14 OF 30

Day 14

today was: good hard mixed proud

What's one time today you noticed the urge and let it pass without acting?

Weekly Step-Down Check-In

This week compared to last week — honestly, how much less?

My trickiest trigger this week and my adjustment:

What less is already giving back to me:

Day 29

today was: good hard mixed proud

*Write a sentence of respect to yourself for showing up on day
whatever-this-is.*

LESS · DAY 30 OF 30

Day 30

today was: good hard mixed proud

Picture the version of you at the end of this tracker. What does her day look like?

30 Days of Less. Look What Grew.

Thirty days of doing less — which means thirty days of noticing, choosing, and showing up. That habit doesn't run the schedule anymore. You do.

Maybe you're at a little less, maybe a lot less. Both are victories, because both are movement in the direction you chose on purpose.

What's next — hold this level, step down another notch, or go for the 60-day journal? Write your plan.

Less of that. More of you. Fair trade.
