WELCOME

Before You Begin

Somewhere inside you is the child you used to be — still carrying what she was handed, still hoping someone will finally come back for her.

This journal is how you go back for her.

Take it slowly. One question at a time. If a page stirs up more than you expected, that's not failure — that's the point of the work. Pause, breathe, and return when you're ready.

Some of these pages touch old wounds. If the heavy ones feel too big to hold alone, a therapist or counselor is a beautiful companion for inner child work. You deserve that.

The image shows a worksheet with a light gray background and a decorative border of small dots. At the top center, the words "STARTING POINT" are written in a bold, pink, sans-serif font. Below this, the title "A Photo in Words" is displayed in a large, bold, black serif font. Underneath the title is a small pink heart icon. A paragraph of pink italicized text follows, reading: "Picture yourself as a child — a specific age, a specific place. Describe little you: what they wore, what they loved, what their days looked like." The lower half of the page contains fifteen horizontal pink lines for writing. At the very bottom center, the website address "ilikeitdeep.us" is printed in a small, black, sans-serif font.

PART ONE

Meeting Her Again

*You can't heal a child you refuse to look at.
Start by simply remembering.*

PART TWO

What She Needed

Naming what was missing is not blaming. It's understanding.

What did you need to hear as a child that nobody said?

When you were sad or scared as a kid, what happened? Who came — and who didn't?

What emotions were not allowed in your childhood home?

[illegible]

LITTLE ME · 10 OF 18

What did you learn to do to keep the peace, and are you still doing it today?

i like it deep . us

What's something adults dismissed as 'no big deal' that was a very big deal to little you?

PART THREE

Reparenting Her Now

You are now the adult in the room. And you get to do it differently.

What would it look like to comfort yourself the way you needed to be comforted then?

What are you doing today that would make little you proud?

Write a short letter to little you. Tell them what you know now.

Small Ways to Show Up for Her

Reparenting isn't one big moment — it's tiny promises kept. Check what you're willing to try.

- ☐ Keep one small promise to yourself today
- ☐ Buy or make the snack little you loved
- ☐ Say no to something without over-explaining
- ☐ Rest without earning it first
- ☐ Do something playful with zero purpose
- ☐ Speak to yourself in a voice you'd use with a child
- ☐ Look at an old photo of yourself with kindness
- ☐ Let yourself cry if it comes — no apology
- ☐ Celebrate something small out loud
- ☐ Ask for help with one thing this week is a doorway back to joy. Visit it often.*

BEFORE YOU CLOSE THIS JOURNAL

A Note, From One Human to Another

You just did something most people avoid their whole lives:
you turned around and faced the child you were.

Be patient with yourself in the days after this work.
Old feelings may surface at odd moments. Let them.
They waited a long time for permission.

And if the wounds you found here feel deep, please know that inner child work is even more powerful with a therapist beside you. Getting support isn't weakness — it's reparenting too.

She waited a long time for you. You came back.
