

ILIKEITDEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

They Told

A Journal for When Your Trust Was Broken
Open

printable pdf · 18 guided questions · for exposed secrets

WELCOME

Before You Begin

You told someone something sacred — and they handed it to people who were never supposed to hold it.
Now you're living the special ache of being exposed:
betrayed AND embarrassed, angry AND ashamed.

First, the truth this journal stands on:
sharing your secret was their sin, not yours.
Trusting someone is not a character flaw.

These pages will help you put down the shame that isn't yours, deal with the people involved, and learn to trust again — carefully, on your terms.

The Moment You Found Out

PART ONE

The Exposure

*Being seen without consent is a real wound.
Treat it like one.*

What did you share, and what made it feel safe to share with them at the time?

[illegible][illegible]

The image shows a worksheet with a light gray background and a decorative border of small pink dots. At the top center, the text "THEY TOLD · 3 OF 18" is written in a bold, pink, sans-serif font. Below this, centered, is a prompt in a black, italicized serif font: "What feelings are tangled together right now? Pull the threads apart and name each one." Underneath the prompt is a small, solid pink heart icon. The lower half of the page is filled with horizontal pink lines for writing. At the very bottom center, the website address "ilikeitdeep.us" is printed in a small, black, sans-serif font.

The image shows a worksheet page with a dotted border. At the top center, it says "THEY TOLD · 5 OF 18". Below this, there is a question in italics: "What story are you afraid people are telling about you — and is it even accurate?". Underneath the question is a small red heart icon. The rest of the page is filled with horizontal lines for writing. At the bottom center, the website "ilikeitdeep.us" is printed.

THEY TOLD · 5 OF 18

What story are you afraid people are telling about you — and is it even accurate?

A small red heart icon centered below the question.

PART TWO

Returning the Shame

The teller should be embarrassed. Somehow the told always is. Let's fix that.

[illegible]

THEY TOLD · 7 OF 18

Write it plainly: who broke the trust here — the one who shared a secret, or the one who had one?

A small, solid pink heart icon centered on the page.

[illegible]

The image shows a worksheet page with a decorative border of small dots. At the top center, the title "THEY TOLD · 8 OF 18" is printed in a bold, pink font. Below the title, there are two lines of italicized text asking reflective questions: "Why does YOUR face get hot over THEIR betrayal?" and "Where did you learn to carry other people's wrongs?". Centered below these questions is a small pink heart icon. The lower half of the page contains horizontal lines for writing, alternating between light blue and light pink colors. At the bottom center, the website address "ilikeitdeep.us" is written in a small, black font.

THEY TOLD · 8 OF 18

*Why does YOUR face get hot over THEIR betrayal?
Where did you learn to carry other people's wrongs?*

A small, solid pink heart icon centered on the page.

What does this reveal about them — their need for gossip currency, their carelessness, their character?

[illegible][illegible]

Write one sentence that returns the shame to sender. Make it one you can repeat when the heat rises.

PART THREE

Trusting Again, Wiser

The goal isn't a locked vault. It's a better guest list.

[illegible][illegible]

What does someone have to SHOW you — not tell you — before they earn your private things?

Who in your life has held your secrets well? What do they do differently?

What relationship, if any, do you want with the person who told? You get to choose the distance.

What would you tell your story about yourself, in your own words, if you took the pen back?

What's one small act of openness you could risk with a proven-safe person, when you're ready?

When You Feel the Eyes on You

*Walking into rooms where people might know is its own battle.
Check your armor.*

- ☐ Head up: their whisper is their shame, not mine
- ☐ I confirm nothing, deny nothing, owe nothing
- ☐ 'That's private' is a full answer
- ☐ One safe person knows the real story — that's enough
- ☐ I don't chase the rumor; I outlive it
- ☐ Breathe before entering, exhale before speaking
- ☐ Kind face, closed book
- ☐ People forget gossip faster than I think they will
- ☐ My secret was a chapter, not my whole story
- ☐ I get to leave any conversation, any time

The Vault-Worthy People

Some people have proven they can hold your things. Write their names and the moments they earned it. This is your new guest list.

BEFORE YOU CLOSE THIS JOURNAL

A Note, From One Human to Another

Someone took your private thing and made it public.

You survived the exposure — and here you are,
still whole, still yours.

Don't let their loose mouth build you a locked heart.

The answer isn't telling no one.

It's telling the right ones.

Your story belongs to you again. Starting now.

Their whisper. Their shame. Your story, back in your hands.
