

ILIKEITDEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

WHY

A Journal for Finding What You're Actually Here For

printable pdf · 18 guided questions · purpose work

WELCOME

Before You Begin

You can have the job, the routine, the full calendar — and still lie awake wondering: what is all this FOR?

That question isn't a crisis. It's a compass waking up.

This journal doesn't hand you a purpose like a fortune cookie. It digs for the one already buried in your life — in what you love, what you grieve, what you can't shut up about, and what you'd do even if nobody paid or clapped.

Answer slowly. Your why has been waiting a long time for someone to ask these questions.

STARTING POINT

The Question Behind the Question

Why did you pick up this journal — what's been feeling pointless, foggy, or unlived lately? Start with what's missing.

PART ONE

PART TWO

Digging Deeper

Your why hides under your shoulds. Keep digging.

The image shows a worksheet page with a dotted border. At the top center, it says "WHY · 7 OF 18". Below this, there is a question in italics: "Whose definition of success are you currently living — and what's YOURS, in your own words?". Underneath the question is a small red heart icon. The rest of the page is filled with horizontal lines for writing. At the bottom center, the website "ilikeitdeep.us" is printed.

What do you want to be true about your life that isn't true yet?

If you had one year of guaranteed courage, what would you build, start, or change?

[illegible]

This is a worksheet page from a journal or workbook. At the top center, it says "WHY · 12 OF 18". Below that is a question in italics: "What are you doing when you feel most like YOU — not the roles, just you?". Underneath the question is a small red heart icon. The majority of the page is filled with horizontal lines for writing. At the bottom center, there is a small URL: "ilikeitdeep.us".

PART THREE

Living Your Why

Purpose isn't a lightning bolt. It's a direction you walk in daily.

Look back at your answers. What words, themes, or feelings keep repeating? Circle them, then write what you see.

Try writing your why in one sentence: 'I'm here to ___ for ___ because ____.' Draft it three ways.

What's one small way you could live that why THIS week — no career change required?

What would need to shrink in your life to give your why more room?

*Who is already living something like your why?
What's one thing you could learn or borrow from them?*

Write about your life five years from now if you follow the why. Then dare yourself to believe it.

Is This My Why or My Should?

Run any goal or path through these checks. Check the ones that ring true — mostly checks means it's a WHY.

- ☐ I'd want this even if I could never post about it
- ☐ Thinking about it gives me energy, not dread
- ☐ It uses what I'm naturally good at
- ☐ It serves someone or something beyond just me
- ☐ I'd regret NOT trying it more than failing at it
- ☐ It sounds like me, not like my parents or my feed
- ☐ I've been circling it for years in different forms
- ☐ It makes my hard past make more sense
- ☐ Small steps toward it feel satisfying, not performative
- ☐ When I imagine it done, I feel peace — not just relief

BEFORE YOU CLOSE THIS JOURNAL

A Note, From One Human to Another

Here's the secret nobody tells you: purpose isn't one big answer you find. It's a direction you keep choosing — in small ways, on ordinary Tuesdays.

You have more clues than you think. You wrote pages of them. The thread was always there, running through everything you love and everything you've survived.

Follow it. Slowly counts. Imperfectly counts.
Starting today counts most.

Your why was never missing. It was waiting to be asked.
