30 Days Present

A Daily Journal for Putting the Phone Down and Picking Your Life Up

printable pdf · 30 daily pages · your life is the main feed

WELCOME

Before Day One

Quick math nobody likes: a few hours of scrolling a day adds up to entire months of your year — spent watching other people live.

This isn't a digital detox bootcamp. You're not throwing the phone in a lake. For 30 days, you're just flipping the ratio: more of your actual life, less of the feed.

Each day: a short check-in about what you noticed, what you traded screen time for, and what being present gave you that the scroll never could.

Your life is the main feed. Time to catch up on it.

My 30-Day Presence Plan

What I keep missing because of my phone:

My why — what I want to be present FOR:

My phone rules for these 30 days (mine, realistic):

What I'll reach for instead when I want to scroll:

Signed by someone whose life deserves her full attention: _____

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 1 OF 30

Day 1

today was: good hard mixed proud

What did you notice today that you would have scrolled past a month ago?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 2 OF 30

Day 2

today was: good hard mixed proud

When did you reach for the phone on autopilot today? What was the feeling right before?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 3 OF 30

Day 3

today was: good hard mixed proud

What did you do with reclaimed minutes today — and how did it feel compared to scrolling?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 4 OF 30

Day 4

today was: good hard mixed proud

Describe one fully-present moment today: who, where, what it felt like in your body.

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 5 OF 30

Day 5

today was: good hard mixed proud

What was hard about being unplugged today? Be honest — the twitch is real.

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 6 OF 30

Day 6

today was: good hard mixed proud

Who got more of your real attention today, and what happened because of it?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 7 OF 30

Day 7

today was: good hard mixed proud

How's your mind feeling — quieter, louder, bored, clearer?

Boredom is withdrawal; write through it.

My sneakiest scroll trap and my fix for next week:

What's changing — attention, mood, sleep, connection:

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 8 OF 30

Day 8

today was: good hard mixed proud

What did the feed used to give you that today you found somewhere real?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 9 OF 30

Day 9

today was: good hard mixed proud

What's one thing about your home, street, or people you never noticed until this week?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 10 OF 30

Day 10

today was: good hard mixed proud

Reread your why. What are you present for tomorrow?

30 DAYS PRESENT · DAY 11 OF 30

Day 11

today was: good hard mixed proud

30 Days of Actually Being Here

A month ago, the feed had first dibs on your attention.

Look what happened when your life got it instead:
the moments you caught, the people you really saw,
the quiet that came back.

You don't have to be perfect from here.
Just keep choosing the room you're in.

Write what presence gave you this month — and the phone habits you're keeping, for good.

The feed will wait. Your life won't. Stay present.
