

ILIKEITDEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

BITCH PLEASE

silencing the voice that doubts you

Swipe up to explore area

BAD BITCH COLLECTION

You are the observer of your thoughts, not the thought itself.

A GUIDED JOURNAL FOR SILENCING THE VOICE THAT DOUBTS YOU

Bitch Please

That voice in your head that says you're not enough? It's loud, but it's not you - it's just a thought. And thoughts can be questioned. This journal teaches you to catch the negative voice the second it shows up, write it down, and talk back to it until it shuts up.

That voice is loud. It's still not the truth.

SECTION ONE

Meet the Voice

What does my inner critic sound like? Give her a name if it helps.

When is she loudest - mornings, before bed, around certain people?

Write down the last mean thing she said to me.

Catch it. Question it. Rewrite it.

SECTION TWO

Catch & Challenge

Negative thought:

Is this actually true, or does it just feel true?

What would I say if my best friend told me this about herself?

Rewrite it as the truth:

You've survived every hard day so far. That's not luck, that's you.

SECTION TWO

Catch & Challenge

Negative thought:

Is this actually true, or does it just feel true?

What would I say if my best friend told me this about herself?

Rewrite it as the truth:

She doesn't need to be quiet to be confident.

SECTION TWO

Catch & Challenge

Negative thought:

Is this actually true, or does it just feel true?

What would I say if my best friend told me this about herself?

Rewrite it as the truth:

You are the observer of your thoughts, not the thought itself.

SECTION TWO

Catch & Challenge

Negative thought:

Is this actually true, or does it just feel true?

What would I say if my best friend told me this about herself?

Rewrite it as the truth:

That voice is loud. It's still not the truth.

SECTION THREE

Remembering Who I Am

Three things I've survived that I don't give myself credit for.

A compliment I brushed off - why didn't I believe it?

What do I actually like about myself, no modesty allowed?

Catch it. Question it. Rewrite it.

SECTION FOUR

Building the New Voice

What's one kind thing I can say to myself today?

Write a pep talk from yourself, to yourself.

You've survived every hard day so far. That's not luck, that's you.

Affirmation Bank

"I'm the observer, not the thought."

"Bitch please, I've survived worse than this thought."

"My confidence doesn't ask permission."

"I don't argue with lies, I just stop believing them."

"I'm allowed to think I'm that girl. I am."

Write three more of your own below – the ones only you would say to you.
