

ILIKEITDEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

HIS LOSS

for the woman who's done waiting

BAD BITCH COLLECTION

Swipe up to explore area

You are not who he left. You are who you're becoming.

A GUIDED JOURNAL FOR THE WOMAN WHO'S DONE WAITING

His Loss

He had you. He didn't hold onto you right. This journal isn't about getting him back - it's about becoming so unmistakably yourself that his loss becomes permanent. Every page is a step away from him and a step toward you. Take your time. Write honestly. No one else has to read this but you.

Every page is a step further from him.

SECTION ONE

The Reality Check

What did I actually lose, and what did I only think I'd lose?

What version of him was I in love with - the real one, or the potential one?

Where did I shrink myself to keep the peace?

What's one truth about this relationship I've been avoiding?

This is your glow, not his loss.

SECTION TWO

The Grieving (Yes, You're Allowed)

What do I miss most - and is it him, or just the comfort of familiar?

Write the goodbye you never got to say.

What would I tell a friend going through exactly this?

Write it messy. Write it true.

SECTION THREE

The Leveling Up

What have I been putting off 'until I had time'? Start it this week.

Three things I'm reclaiming that I gave up for him.

What does my glow-up actually look like - not for him, for me?

Who was I before this relationship shrank me?

She's watching you become her.

SECTION FOUR

The Glow Forward

Write a letter from one year from now, thriving, to the woman writing this today.

What will he see when he finally notices? Describe her.

You are not who he left. You are who you're becoming.

Affirmation Bank

"His loss was my launch."

"I don't chase closure. I create it."

"I'm not who he lost. I'm who's next."

"My glow doesn't need his permission."

"I level up in silence and arrive in full color."

Write three more of your own below – the ones only you would say to you.
