A Daily Recovery Journal for Quitting Porn

*"Write it. Feel it. Heal it.
Your journal knows the real you."*

Before Day One

First: you're not broken, and you're not the only one. You're someone whose brain got trained by something engineered to train it — and who has now decided to take the controls back. That decision is the whole foundation. This journal is the daily practice built on top of it. Each day: a quick honest check-in. Urges noticed, triggers named, wins counted. Slips, if they happen, get honesty instead of shame — shame is fuel for the cycle, and we're done feeding it. Recovery grows fastest with support. A therapist or recovery group alongside this journal is strength, not defeat.

DAY ZERO · MY COMMITMENT

My 30-Day Commitment

What I'm stepping away from, in my own words:

My why — what I want back:

My riskiest times and places (name them now):

My plan when an urge hits (people, moves, exits):

Signed, with self-respect: _____

Day 1

Any urges today? What was happening right before they showed up?

Day 2

What feeling was today's hardest moment really about — stress, loneliness, boredom?

Day 3

What did you do instead when the pull came? Log the win.

Day 4

How's your sleep, energy, and focus today compared to day one?

Day 5

What device or situation do you need a better boundary with?

Day 6

What are you feeling more of lately — and is any of it uncomfortable? That's normal. Name it.

Day 7

Write about a moment today you felt genuinely proud or present.

Weekly Check-In

This week's clean days and close calls — the honest count: My strongest trigger this week and what I'm changing about it: What's coming back — focus, confidence, real connection:

Day 8

What would you tell a friend fighting the same fight today?

Day 9

What's one way today-you protected tomorrow-you?

Day 10

Re-read your why. Does it need updating? Write today's version.
