I LIKE IT DEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

Finding My Way Back

A Gentle Journal for Low and Heavy Days

*"Write it. Feel it. Heal it.
Your journal knows the real you."*

W E L C O M E

Before You Begin

This journal has one rule: there are no rules. You can write one word or three pages. You can skip any question that feels like too much today. You can put it down for a week and come back. It will not judge you. Heavy days make everything feel like a test. This is not a test. These pages are just a soft place to set down what you've been carrying. One gentle note: this journal is a place to think, not a replacement for support. If the heavy days keep stacking up, a therapist, doctor, or someone you trust deserves to know. Asking for help is strength.

Circle any that fit. There's no wrong answer — this is just where you're starting from.

Anything else about today, in your own words:

PART ONE

Where I Am

You can't find your way back without first admitting where you're standing. That takes courage.

Small Ways Forward

You don't have to climb out today. You just have to face the door.

You showed up. That counts.

There's no rush here.

One Tiny Thing at a Time

Small, doable actions. Check off only what feels possible — one counts.

- ☐ Drink a glass of water
- ☐ Open a window or step outside for one minute
- ☐ Wash your face or take a shower
- ☐ Eat something, anything
- ☐ Put on clean, comfortable clothes
- ☐ Send one short text to one person
- ☐ Sit in sunlight for five minutes
- ☐ Play one song you used to love
- ☐ Take ten slow breaths
- ☐ Write one sentence in this journal

Proof I Kept Going

A Note, From One Human to Another

This journal is a place to think, not a replacement for support. If these heavy days keep stacking up, or things ever feel unsafe, please reach out to a therapist, doctor, or someone you trust. You don't have to carry this alone, and asking for help is not a failure — it's one of the strongest things you can do. You picked up this journal.

You showed up for yourself. That already counts.

You found your way here. That counts.
