

Losing a Sibling

For losing part of your story, the person who knew you before you became you.

I LIKE IT DEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

Losing a Sibling

For losing part of your story, the person who knew you

*"Write it. Feel it. Heal it.
Your journal knows the real you."*

BEFORE YOU BEGIN

A Note Before You Begin

A sibling knew you before you were anyone — before the versions of you that came later, the ones only they remember. Losing them isn't just losing a person, it's losing a witness to your whole beginning. People may check in on your parents and forget to check in on you. Your grief counts just as much. This is a place for it.

What's your earliest memory of them?

You're doing the work.

What's a memory with them that still makes you smile?

What did they understand about your childhood that no one else does anymore?

What's an inside joke, nickname, or sibling-only tradition that was just yours?

What was your dynamic — the protector, the troublemaker, the one you fought with and defended in the same breath?

What did they teach you, on purpose or just by growing up alongside you?

What's the first thing that felt different once they were gone?

What's something you still want to call and tell them, or argue with them about?

Who do you turn to now for the shared memories only they could confirm?

How has this loss changed your relationship with the rest of your family?

What does it feel like to be the only one — or one of fewer — who remembers where you both came from?

LOSING A SIBLING · PHOTO PAGES

This was the day _____

glue or tape a photo here

A little about this photo:

LOSING A SIBLING · PHOTO PAGES

This was the day _____

glue or tape a photo here

A little about this photo:

LOSING A SIBLING · PHOTO PAGES

This was the day _____

glue or tape a photo here

A little about this photo:

LOSING A SIBLING · PHOTO PAGES

This was the day _____

glue or tape a photo here

A little about this photo:

Write them a letter. Say whatever's still sitting unsaid, even the complicated parts.

What's something you wish you'd told them more often?

If your relationship had hard chapters, what's true that you're still making peace with?

What's a piece of them you carry in who you are now?

What's one thing that felt okay today, even a small thing?

What do you need permission to feel today?

What's a way you can honor their memory this week?

Write down one thing you know for sure about your history together, even if everything else feels uncertain.

*They knew you before you were anyone.
Carry that with you — it's still yours.*

ILIKEITDEEP.US · STAY DEEP

