I LIKE IT DEEP · A GUIDED JOURNAL

The Game of Life

A Journal Inspired by Florence Scovel Shinn

*"Write it. Feel it. Heal it.
Your journal knows the real you."*

W E L C O M E

Before You Begin

In 1925, Florence Scovel Shinn wrote that life is not a battle — it's a game. And like any game, it goes better when you know the rules. Her rules were simple and startling: your words set the direction, your expectations do the steering, and what you give out circles back. 'Your word is your wand,' she taught — meaning the things you say about your life are quietly building it. This journal turns her ideas into practice: noticing what you speak, expect, give, and fear — and choosing better moves. Consider it your playbook.

How has life felt lately — like a game you're playing, or a battle you're losing? Describe the board as you see it today.

PART ONE

Your Word Is Your Wand

Shinn taught that we're always casting — the only question is what.

Expectation Sets the Table

'Prepare for the thing you have asked for,' Shinn said — act like it's coming.

What's one small, concrete way to 'set the table' for what you want — the empty frame, the cleared closet, the saved seat?

Small steps still count.

The Boomerang Rule

What you send out circles back. Play generously.

What could you give freely this week — help, praise, forgiveness, a real compliment — and to whom?

You showed up. That counts.

The Player's Daily Moves

Small moves that change the whole board. Check the ones you'll play this week.

- ☐ Catch one negative rerun and flip the sentence out loud
- ☐ Speak one bold present-tense intention before coffee
- ☐ Set the table: do one thing that assumes the good outcome
- ☐ Give one sincere compliment with no agenda
- ☐ Release one grip — a worry, a grudge, a need to control the
- ☐ how
- ☐ Write down one thing that went right today, however small
- ☐ Say 'thank you' for something that hasn't arrived yet
- ☐ Replace one complaint with one request
- ☐ Do one generous thing quietly, telling no one
- ☐ End the day naming the move you're proudest of

A Note, From One Human to Another

Whether you take Shinn's ideas as spiritual law or simply as brilliant psychology, the practice is the same: watch your words, expect good boldly, give generously, and loosen your grip on the how. You've been playing this game your whole life.

Now you're playing it on purpose — and players who play on purpose win differently.

*Life is a game. You just learned the rules.
Play boldly.*
